Teaching Philosophy

Teaching English should be done in a way that we foster a love for learning, creating a positive learning environment. Exposing pupils to a widening range of opportunities to discover the importance of the language and explore progressing levels of tasks in an enjoyable manner. I consider having experienced the American culture, being full of energy and liking the job key to having good rapport with the students. It's essential to praise them for their accomplishments and focus on pupils' strengths nevertheless we should point out their weaknesses though group and individual feedback sessions.

Essentially, we as educators should install the highest ideal: Belief in the value of hard work and attitude change of academic success .
