Teaching Philosophy

Teaching should motivate the student to question all beliefs and cause them to use their critical thinking skills to find the truth and reality in their lives. I feel students need to be given the ability to explore and learn for themselves. I don't get upset with students who may not do well in class and I have had a number of students take my class again after failing. Whether a student chooses to learn or not is their choice, however, to be there and be supportive of the student is the choice of the teacher.
